Received and published: 26 February 2015

This manuscript represents a good advance related to the litter contribution to soil organic carbon in agricultural processes. The authors have done a great work to present all the methodological and analysis in a presentable and interesting way. However, some typographical mistake with the English version should be considered by the authors. Furthermore, the manuscript has been lacking the conclusion section and requires a more in-depth discussion. In any case, all of this could be solved. I consider that it is a good one manuscript to have in considered in Solid Earth after the revision processes.
