GENERAL COMMENTS This is a very useful paper by the leading expert on the Urals that summaries progress in Urals research during the past decade after the great expansion of western collaboration in the 90s.

Dr. Puchkov writes well, remarkably well for a non-native English speaker, but the manuscript could benefit from some additional editing by a native English speaker. I have made some suggestions. It is mostly a question of changing just a few words here and there.

The paper is well structured and full of interesting information. I thoroughly enjoyed

reading the paper

SPECIFIC COMMENTS

Page 11, line 15: the meaning of "problems of acquisition of primary data". Does this mean that data were not collected, or does this mean that data were collected but were flawed? Page 11, line 22: what do you mean by "new materials"? Do you mean new seismic profiles?

Page 12, line 25-26: insert citation of Ernst et al. 2008" which includes details on the 1385 Ma magmatism worldwide. Page 12, line 28: after "compare with Ernst, 2014" consider adding "and "Ernst et al. 2016" This new Nature Geoscience paper includes the latest information on 720 Ma LIPs of northern Laurentia and southern Siberia.
